A MORNING SCNG. I wake this morn, and all my life Is freshly mine to live; The future with sweet promise rif.

And crown of joy to give. New words to speak, new thoughts to hear New I ve to give and take; Perchance new burdens I may bear For love's own sweetest sake.

New hopes to open in the sun, New efforts worth the will, Or tasks with yesterday begun More bravely to fulfill.

Fresh seeds for all the time to be, Are in my hand to sow, Whereby, for others and for me, Undreamed-of fruit may grow.

In each white daisy 'mid the grass That turns my foot aside, In each uncurling fern I pass, Some sweetest joy may hide.

And if, when even tide shall fall In shades across my way.
It seems that nought my thoughts recall But life of every day;

Yet if each step in shine or shower He where thy footsteps trod, Then blessed be every happy hour That leads me nearer God.

The Extinction of Species.

The extinction of many animals that are known to have formerly existed on the earth is a subject which cannot very easily be explained, while the number of them is greater than at first would be supposed. Various species no doubt undergo gradual extinction by changes which deprive them of their accustomed food; but others seem to die out from unknown causes. During the historic period a considerable number of animals have been swept off the British Islands, among which are the bear, the wolf, the Irish elk, etc. In America, during the comparatively short period of its history, various species have vanished, and others are following them. The beaver, formerly so generally spread over the whole country, is now only to be found in remote regions. The bison is very much diminished in numbers, and must ere long be extirpated. The mastodon a creature of enormous bulk, has totally disappeared, although, along with the skeletons of them which have been discovered, there are evidences of their having lived on food derived from plants which are still existing. In other parts of the world, the dodo and the moa have A planoforte maker says that of all perished within the last few centu- TUTT'S PILLS the same fate .- Popular Science Monthly.
